NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

Pure Imagination was commissioned by the Brewer Middle School Jazz Band, Brewer, Maine, co-directed by Lanissa and Brian Nadeau. This beautiful theme is from the 1971 film Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory.

In preparing the piece, the introduction should set the tone. The opening should be light and not more than mf. Direct the players to bring the moving lines out against the harmony.

At measure 9, the rhythm section can be more active in support of the solo as the alto solo begins. During the bridge melody at measure 25, work to make the sax section answering statement at measure 29 the peak of the phrase. Approaching measure 33, direct the drummer to play a simple but effective fill that sets up the ensemble figure in 33. Strive to make the dynamic contrast as dramatic as possible leading into the alto solo at measure 42. During this section, keep the backgrounds dynamically beneath the alto. Brass can play into the stands to keep the volume level down if needed.

Regarding articulation, the marcato or rooftop accents (▲) are detached but not staccato—think “daht.” For phrasing, it is important that in each wind section the players release together. This may not seem significant, but accurate and effective releases will make every band sound more polished.

Leading into the home stretch at measure 50, direct the band to carefully observe the modulation and to build the ensemble into the ff, making sure that this section is the dynamic highlight of the chart. Caution the band not to rush as the volume level increases.

Overall, the chart does not necessarily demand a strong brass section, but more importantly, a well-balanced ensemble. Blend and balance the group as you would a wind band, with emphasis on the tuning of the bottom voices and close tuning of any matching pitches across the sections.

I appreciate you taking the time to program this arrangement and I wish you all the best for a successful performance!
